Brothers' heartfelt reunion after 30 years apart

Two brothers will get to meet each other after 30 years apart in this week's episode of the Gwesty Aduniad (Tuesday evening 27 September).

Robin Morris from Caernarfon has hardly seen his brother Tomos, who lives in Abergavenny since they left the children's home in Bontnewydd near Caernarfon where they grew up during the 1960s. They were sent to the home when they were 3 and 6 years old, when their mother died giving birth to Robin's little brother.

Robin, who has suffered with dementia since 2011, will visit the hotel with his wife Carol at his side, and it is hoped that the special reunion will help trigger some memories. One era that is still vivid in Robin's memory is his time at Bontnewydd children's home:

"He may not recognise his brother so suddenly" said Carol "but I hope it might trigger his memory a bit by talking about memories from years ago."

Also joining in the reunion will be Dafydd Hughes, an old friend of both from their time at the care home:

"I went to the home in 1960" said Dafydd. "I remember the day very well - going on the bus with Grandma and I had a small brown suitcase. I cried because Mother was a Grandma in a way; she raised me for years.

"I've haven't seen Tomos since I was 12 years old, and I've not seen Robin for twelve to fifteen years. Today is a special day.

"Tomos and Robin were in the home in before me and I became friends with them. We were a group of about 40 children back then, and it was like one big family. The home was special to me and I know it was a special place for a lot of other people who were there."

There will be an extra surprise on the day, as someone else very special from this period in their lives will join them for an afternoon tea to reminisce.
